

ARISTIDE

and the endless revolution

Only an hour south of Miami, the elected president of the Western Hemisphere's poorest nation, Jean Bertrand Aristide, has twice been forced from office with the complicity of the international community.

An intelligent and engrossing examination of the oft-suppressed story of the 2004 coup d'état in Haiti, Nicolas Rossier's film investigates the events that led to the second violent expulsion of Aristide from Haiti, and reveals the tangled web of hope, deceit, and political violence that has brought the world's first black republic to its knees and provides an understandable backdrop for Haiti's chaos and despair left by the devastating earthquake

Maui Community College
Friday February 12th
Ka Lama 103 - 6:00 pm
Free - Public Welcome

